

A Nationwide Problem

Native Americans are not being reported as missing and their cases are not getting the attention they deserve, in comparison with other missing people.

A Nationwide Effort

Lost and Missing in Indian Country is ONE PLACE that you can go to, to give or get information on missing Native Americans. We strive to work with families of the Missing, Law Enforcement and other outlets to get the word out.

MISSING ADULTS

There is sometimes a reluctance by law enforcement to take a report on a missing adult, saying adults have a right to go missing. While this is true, many times there are underlying factors connected with an adult going missing that no one is aware of.

Missing adults can be in danger just as children can. Different factors, to include but not limited to age, mental capacity, and health issues can put adults at risk as missing persons as well as children.

There is NO waiting period mandated by authority policy before you can report a person missing to law enforcement.

SILVER ALERT: An emergency message generated by law enforcement to notify the public about a missing adult. The missing adult has risk factors such as mental impairment, medical needs or elderly issues.

MISSING CHILDREN

Sadly, a large number of missing children are abducted by a parent. There are laws in place if a child is taken by a non-custodial parent.

Stranger - Danger Abductions:

Although these are rare, they happen. The faster law enforcement can be advised a child is missing and get the word out, the better the chances of finding the child.

Runaways: There is no such thing as “Just a Runaway”. Any child that is a runaway is in danger of exploitation by others.

AMBER ALERT: An emergency message generated by law enforcement to notify the public of a missing child.
